EDITORIAL

I must apologise for the long delay in issuing this the fourth Bulletin but hopefully there will not be a similar delay next time. This issue consists largely of results of which there are many.

RULES REVISION MEETING

The annual league rules revision meeting has been fixed for Wednesday 8th June 1988 at the Rushcliffe Leisure Centre, West Bridgford. I expect most of you know that already. Note that proposals for any changes have to reach the Association Secretary, Geoff Gibson, by 4th May (in writing).

LEAGUE NOTES

The results (including those shown in the league tables) shown in this Bulletin do not reflect any penalties. Remember that the default of a game on certain boards and the default of a match incur penalties in accordance with Schedule E of the rules. These will be applied after the next L.M.C. meeting on 22 April.

Can I remind team officials that fixtures cannot be rearranged without the consent of the league secretary and will only be given in extreme circumstances which usually means bad weather or venue problems. This applies whether the opposition agrees or not.

Ron Clunie - League Secretary

WORLD CANDIDATES MATCHES

In the World Championships Candidates matches played in Canada to find the next challenger to Kasparov for the world crown both English players were successful in their first round matches.

Nigel Short beat Sax (Hungary) $3\frac{1}{2} - 1\frac{1}{2}$ winning the first two games and drawing the next three.

Jon Speelman beat Seirawan (USA) 4 - 1 winning games 2, 3 and 5 and drawing games 1 and 4.

In the other matches Korcinoi was trailing Hjartarson (Iceland) 3 - 1 but won games 5 and 6 to tie the match and force a 2 game play off which to everyone's surprise he then lost. Spraggett (Canada) fought back also to tie with Sokolov (USSR). The play off was tied. The games then became instant death over one hour, draw again, 30 minutes, draw again, 15 minutes draw again, 15 minutes again and Spraggett finally won when he forked Sokolov's K and Q with a knight with less than a minute left on his clock.

There were victories in the remaining games for Yusopov $3\frac{1}{2} - 1\frac{1}{2}$ over Ehlvest (both USSR) and Timman (Holland) $3\frac{1}{2} - 2\frac{1}{2}$ over Salov (USSR) and Portisch (Hungary) $3\frac{1}{2} - 2\frac{1}{2}$ over Vaganian (USSR)

In the next round Short will play Speelman which guarantees a British qualifier in the semi finals. The draw in full:-

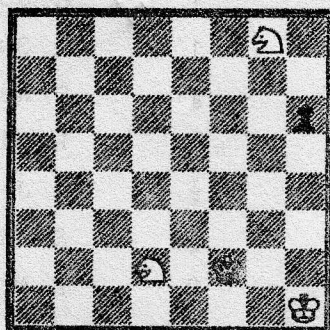

Karpov	V	Spraggett
Yusopov	V	Hjartarson
Timman	V	Portisch
Short	V	Speelman

How to win with two knights against a pawn.

I was at a Conference on Computer Chess recently. Some 'database' work on the ending KNN v. KP was actually completed while the conference was in progress, so the following is relatively hot from the press. Many of the 5-piece endings have now been completely solved by computer search; I think it is fair to say that every such search has shown some surprises, in that the general result was not what we expected, or the length of some solutions was much longer than expected, or whatever. 6-piece endings are still just beyond the powers of reasonable computation, but that will soon change, so look out for more surprises.

Anyway, back to NN against P. 'Everyone knows' how to do this. You blockade the P with one N, use the other N to drive the opposing K into a corner, then rush over with the blockading N to deliver mate while the P tries to promote. Of course, the best defence is to rush the pawn forward as far as it will go. Right? Wrong! The following is the longest forced win in this ending. No room for notes or explanation. Please do play through this. This ending does occur in practice, if only because the most practical defence in a lost minor-piece ending is often to sacrifice a piece or two for the opponent's last pawns. At first, the whole sequence seems nonsensical; but by about move 100 you will start seeing the patterns, and then you can replay the whole thing and observe the stunning beauty of the manoeuvres.
